

children's

MINISTRY

in the 21st century

Group

Loveland, Colorado

www.group.com

Group resources actually work!

This Group resource helps you focus on “The 1 Thing”—a life-changing relationship with Jesus Christ. “The 1 Thing” incorporates our R.E.A.L. approach to ministry. It reinforces a growing friendship with Jesus, encourages long-term learning, and results in life transformation, because it’s:

Relational
Learner-to-learner interaction enhances learning and builds Christian friendships.

Experiential
What learners experience through discussion and action sticks with them up to 9 times longer than what they simply hear or read.

Applicable
The aim of Christian education is to equip learners to be both hearers and doers of God’s Word.

Learner-based
Learners understand and retain more when the learning process takes into consideration how they learn best.

Children’s Ministry in the 21st Century: The Encyclopedia of Practical Ideas
Copyright © 2007 Group Publishing, Inc.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced in any manner whatsoever without prior written permission from the publisher, except where noted in the text and in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical articles and reviews. For information, e-mail Permissions at inforights@group.com or write Permissions, Group Publishing, Inc., Administrative Support Services Dept., P.O. Box 481, Loveland, CO 80539.

Visit our Web site: www.group.com

Credits

Contributing Authors: Ty Bryant, Rick Chromey, Heather Dunn, Debbie Gowensmith, Dale Hudson, Craig Jutila, Carmen Kamrath, Janna Kinner, Scott Kinner, Becki Manni, Steve Parolini, Sondra Saunders, Larry Shallenberger, Sharyn Spradlin, Pat Verbal, Jim Wideman, Dana Wilkerson, and Vicki L.O. Witte

Editors: Heather Dunn, Amber Van Schooneveld, and Ann Marie Rozum

Creative Development Editor: Christine Yount Jones

Chief Creative Officer: Joani Schultz

Copy Editor: Ann Jahns

Art Director: Josh Emrich

Print Production Artist: Julia Martin

Illustrator: Josh Emrich

Cover Art Directors/Designers: Josh Emrich and Veronica Lucas

Cover Illustrators: Josh Emrich and Veronica Lucas

Production Manager: DeAnne Lear

Unless otherwise indicated, all Scripture quotations are taken from the Holy Bible, New Living Translation, copyright © 1996, 2004. Used by permission of Tyndale House Publishers, Inc., Wheaton, Illinois 60189. All rights reserved.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Children’s ministry in the 21st century : the encyclopedia of practical ideas.
p. cm.
ISBN-13: 978-0-7644-3389-4 (pbk. : alk. paper)
1. Church work with children. I. Group Publishing.
BV639.C4C435 2006
259’.22--dc22

2006027868

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1 16 15 14 13 12 11 10 09 08 07
Printed in the United States of America.

Contents

Contributors .....	5
Foreword by Christine Yount Jones .....	7
Using This Resource .....	8
Chapter 1
Not of This World .....	10
The Times They Are a-Changin' by Rick Chromey .....	11
Try This by Larry Shallenberger .....	22
Chapter 2
The Rewiring of Kids' Brains .....	36
The Wired Child by Dale Hudson .....	37
Try This by Steve Parolini .....	45
Chapter 3
Hottest Educational Trends .....	58
What's New (Relatively Speaking) by Heather Dunn .....	59
Try This by Scott Kinner .....	68
Chapter 4
How to Minister to Kids of All Kinds .....	84
Tomorrow's Kids by Pat Verbal .....	85
Try This by Janna Kinner .....	95
Chapter 5
Family Ministry for the New Century .....	108
Built to Last by Carmen Kamrath .....	109
Try This by Dana Wilkerson .....	117

Chapter 6*Reaching the Edges: Preschoolers and Preteens . . . 128

Reaching the Next Generation of Preschoolers . . . . . 129

by Sondra Saunders

Try This by Becki Manni . . . . . 135

Reaching—and Keeping—Today's Preteens by Ty Bryant . . . 147

Try This by Becki Manni . . . . . 152

Chapter 7*Church for Postmodern Kids . . . . . 160

The Emergent Church by Sharyn Spradlin . . . . . 161

Try This by Vicki L.O. Witte . . . . . 166

Chapter 8*Emerging Ministry Trends . . . . . 178

A Change in the Weather by Jim Wideman . . . . . 179

The 21st-Century Digital Age by Craig Jutila . . . . . 183

Try This by Debbie Gowensmith . . . . . 186

Appendix: Group Publishing's Children's Ministry Resources . . . . 204

CONTRIBUTORS

Ty Bryant is the pastor for 4th through 6th grades at Perimeter Church in Duluth, Georgia. Because he became a follower of Jesus Christ during his preteen years, Ty is motivated to reach this age group with the gospel that has changed his life. He resides in Georgia with his cat, Stella.

Rick Chromey is professor of youth and family ministry at Kentucky Christian University in Grayson, Kentucky. In nearly a quarter of a century of professional youth ministry, Rick has served churches and colleges as a youth and children's pastor, professor, and trainer. Currently a doctoral candidate at George Fox Evangelical Seminary, Rick has authored two books, Youth Ministry in Small Churches and Children's Ministry Guide for Smaller Churches. He's also a regular contributor and columnist for Children's Ministry Magazine. He and his wife, Patty, have two children.

Heather Dunn is the children's product developer for Group Publishing. She started volunteering in children's ministry in her teens and has continued her involvement ever since. Her first career was in education. During the 20 years before coming to Group, she served as children's minister in three different churches. Heather is the creator of Group's exciting new JabberMat. She and her husband, Ken, have two adult children.

Dale Hudson has served in children's ministry for more than 17 years. His ministry to children has received recognition in numerous newspaper, magazine, and television reports, including TIME magazine, Christianity Today magazine, and ABC. He is the children's director at Central Christian Church in Las Vegas, Nevada. Dale and his wife, Pamela, have two sons.

Craig Jutila is the children's pastor at Saddleback Church in Lake Forest, California, where he leads a dynamic staff of 30 ministers and directors, more than 1,000 volunteers, and 4,500 children weekly. Craig is the founder of empoweringkids.net, a company designed to encourage, equip, energize, and empower other children's ministry leaders. Craig has written several articles, curricula, and books, the most notable from Group Publishing, including Leadership Essentials for Children's Ministry, The Growing Leader: Healthy Essentials for Children's Ministry, and 2-Minute Encouragers for Teachers. Craig and his wife have three children.

Carmen Kamrath is the associate editor for Children's Ministry Magazine. She has a master's degree in education and has more than 15 years experience serving as a children's pastor in Arizona and Colorado. Carmen and her husband, Dan, have three children and live in Loveland, Colorado.

Sondra Saunders is the senior preschool/children's minister at Prestonwood Baptist Church in Dallas, Texas, and has served there for 27 years. She has been in the ministry for 44 years, and Prestonwood is one of four churches where she has served. Sondra has taught leadership conferences in numerous states and is a former Children's Ministry Magazine columnist.

Sharyn Spradlin has specialized in ministry for children, youth, and families for more than 20 years. She serves as a ministry coach for a Korean-American congregation (Hunjae Community Church of Seattle). She is a long-time contributor to Children's Ministry Magazine and a veteran presenter for Children's Ministry Magazine Live workshops.

Pat Verbal is the founder of Ministry to Today's Child. She is passionate about sharing her 20 years of pastoral experience with today's parents and teachers. Pat is a featured columnist for Children's Ministry Magazine and Teach Kids! magazine. She has co-authored 10 books, including Special Needs, Special Ministry, which is a bestseller among churches seeking to serve children with disabilities. Pat holds an MA from the Haggard School of Theology at Azusa Pacific University, where she served on the Council for Church Leaders.

Jim Wideman has served as a children's pastor for more than 28 years. He has created many resources for children's ministry, authored numerous books and magazine articles, and hosted the club children's ministry leadership audio series. Jim also has received the "Excellence in Children's Ministry" award and Children's Ministry Magazine's "Pioneers of the Decade" award. Currently, Jim serves at Church on the Move in Tulsa, Oklahoma, reaching more than 4,000 children weekly. Jim and Julie, his wife of 28 years, have two daughters, Yancy and Whitney.

FOREWORD

Welcome to Children's Ministry in the 21st Century: The Encyclopedia of Practical Ideas.

The fact that you picked up this book in the first place says a lot about you. You're committed to children, and you're committed to God. You obviously care about pursuing the most effective, trend-sensitive, need-meeting children's ministry possible—or you wouldn't be reading this book. You care about making the gospel relevant to kids and connecting with them in ways that are culturally relevant—ways they'll understand and hear so God can invade their lives.

Everything around us is changing. Culture. Kids. Families. Ministry methods. How can we keep up?

You've most likely heard the tongue-in-cheek use of the verse "We shall not all sleep for we shall be changed" in the nursery. It's highly likely that verse could be used throughout our entire children's ministries! Change. We're moving at what seems like the speed of light at times, and it affects our ministry today and tomorrow.

That's what this book is about. We asked top children's ministers to dive into the information you need, to flesh it out with their years of experience, and to guide us as we move into the 21st century. So, in the next pages of this book, you'll hear from experts such as Pat Verbal, Craig Jutila, Jim Wideman, Rick Chromey, and more. The people whose words and ideas appear in this book are wise students of kids, their culture, and making the gospel relevant for today.

We believe that God passionately loves children and has a special place in his heart for them. We believe that children are the church of today and deserve every attention and effort that's possible in order to share with them the love of God. We believe kids can have a thriving, wonderful relationship with Jesus and that they need Jesus' friends like you to help them.

That's why we've packed this book with 10 essays and dozens of practical ideas. You'll find tools, tips, activities, events, programs, creative ideas, and more after each essay that'll help you apply what you've just learned.

Our prayer is that as you use this book, you'll connect with kids in a way you never have before. Our hope is that the ideas and concepts in this book will teach you the secret kid-speak you need to impact this generation for Christ. May God bless you as you reach out to the most precious people on earth—kids!

Christine Yount Jones

Group's Children's Ministry Champion

USING THIS RESOURCE

We've compiled this book to be your encyclopedia for the new face of children's ministry in the 21st century.

We've highlighted eight specific trends in culture and ministry, such as technology, emerging family ministries, and the postmodern church, which are crucial for leaders of children to understand and apply. And we'll help you do both.

Each chapter has two parts. The first section of each chapter includes essays from experts in children's ministry to help you understand each new trend and how it affects your children and ministry. The second section, called "Try This," provides practical activities for applying what you've discovered—great answers to the question, "So what can I do about this in my ministry?"

The "Try This" sections will give you fresh ideas for events, games, small groups, worship, discussion starters, object lessons, the arts, outreach, and on and on. You'll see the "OK to copy" icon  on pages where you'll distribute copies either to individual students or to groups.

Through this volume, you'll see your children's spiritual lives in a new light and understand who they really are with a fresh perspective. And you'll gain valuable, practical, and innovative ideas that will inspire your students to develop a life-transforming relationship with the Messiah and King.

Our prayer is that this tool will encourage you and strengthen your ministry as you serve God by loving children. May God work through you and your ministry in ways you can't yet even imagine!

The background is a dense, intricate black and white illustration. At the bottom, a cityscape features tall buildings, some with smokestacks emitting clouds. A winding road with cars and a bridge with more cars is visible. A robot with a boxy head and arms is positioned in the lower right. Above the city, a rabbit is depicted in a dynamic pose, a fish is swimming, and a small airplane flies. The upper portion of the image is filled with various abstract shapes, including circles, squares, and lines, some resembling molecular structures or geometric patterns. The overall style is whimsical and detailed.

CHAPTER

1

Not of This World

THE TIMES THEY ARE A-CHANGIN’

BY RICK CHROMEY

We live in a world of unbelievable change.

A decade now seems like a century.

Remember 1995? Back when the web was a spider’s home. Back when mail was paper and phones had cords. Back when Spam came in a can.

In 1994 Netscape permitted broad Internet access and the whole world went “e.” Snail mail morphed into e-mail. Cell phones replaced land lines and became microcomputers and televisions. Digital downloads, blogs, iPods, and satellite television reinvented communication and entertainment industries. Wi-Fi (wireless) created instant global connectivity.

We’ve become a culture of infinite connections via the Web. From MySpace to Amazon to Google to Wikipedia, we connect and commune through text-messaging, blogs, and chats. The technological ABCs abound. CD-R. DVD. GPS. AVI. MPEG. JPEG. MP3. In a cordless, wireless culture the frontier is cyberspace, and every human institution (politics, entertainment, education, commerce, church) is impacted.

In the words of best-selling author Thomas Friedman, the “world is flat.” The rise of Web technology, wireless communications, and virtual reality has changed cultural rules, demolished hierarchical authority, and eliminated walls of class or creed. Have modem, will travel. The greatest indicator of poverty or ignorance or cultural relevance is Web connectivity (aka the “digital divide”).

Either you're online or you're not.

Consequently, children's ministries that blossomed in the 1980s and 1990s are facing new paradigms. What worked five years ago now fails to attract or educate. Many churches (and their children's ministries) are disconnected, unplugged, or offline from their own neighborhoods, families, and cultural context.

CAN YOU HEAR ME NOW? (THE RISE OF NEW CULTURAL LANGUAGES)

We reside in a postmodern world.

For over five centuries, our culture operated within modern frames. Technological innovation—namely the printing press and the mechanized clock—shattered the chains of the Dark Ages. Modernity, via new structures and communication tools, emerged through the Renaissance and Reformation, Enlightenment and Industrial Revolution.

In a modern world, the church reflected this machine/word culture. The Bible was printed in chapter and verse. Denominations emerged (different strokes for different folks). Print and words reigned through sermon, hymn, and lesson. The church (like culture) mechanized its message via principles and purposes, sequence and science.

Modern children's ministries operated within calendar seasons, word formats, and passive learning models. Children memorized a book (the Bible). They learned in age-graded classrooms and within authoritative systems. From Sunday school to children's church, kids were taught "belief in a box." Church was a place, an answer, or a destination. Faith was a frame.

But that world is fading—fast!

Three technological advances in the 20th century have introduced a global, postmodern, post-Christian cultural shift: television, cellular phones, and the Internet. Television launched a culture of image, experience, and virtual reality. Cell and Web technology shaped new communication formats with instant, global, and relational consequence.

As a result, children's ministries of the 21st century will reinvent themselves around relationships, images, and experiences that are 24/7/365, where faith is a personal, dynamic journey. The Word will be image. Flesh and blood. Experiential. In a high-tech culture, people value a high-touch connection.

Can you hear me now? Technology releases new cultural tones and dialects. We're talking but kids don't understand. A cultural language—or how we interact or operate within social frameworks—is intricately tied to technology.

Modern (1500–1990)	VS. Postmodern (1990–)
Printing Press, Mechanized Clock “I think, therefore I am.” -Rene Descartes “Here I stand.” -Martin Luther	Television, Cell Phone, Internet “Can we all get along?” -Rodney King “I still haven’t found what I’m looking for.” -Bono, U2
Mechanized System Science Class/Creed Industry Logic	Relational Community Connection Tolerance Global
Passive Lecture/Sermon Hierarchical “In the Box” Destination Religious	Experiential Authentic Participatory Extreme Journey Spiritual
Word Literacy Print Audio Mono-task Foundational	Experiential Digital Instant/Live Visual Multi-task Fluid Imaginative

In Acts 2, on the day of Pentecost, the church was born. Ironically, its greatest issue was communication. These largely illiterate Jews faced a multilingual audience. According to Scripture, the apostles were gifted by the Holy Spirit to speak the people's language (including unique dialects). This miracle was not of man, but of the Holy Spirit.

Similarly, children's ministries must recognize that human purpose, program, or power will fail. Only the Holy Spirit enables us to speak culturally relevant messages and to live our faith in a dark, carnal world.

Fortunately our culture is hungry for God.

And children are the most receptive to spirituality.

S-P-I-R-I-T

Astronauts are "sailors" (naut) of the "stars" (astro). However, God calls his leaders to different worlds. Leonard Sweet suggests that postmodern Christians are "pneumanauts," or "sailors" (naut) of the "Spirit" (pneuma). We're in the world, yet not of it. We fearlessly soar above it.

The emerging postmodern culture spells "S-P-I-R-I-T," and children's ministries in the 21st century must learn to sail this new frontier.

Sensory

Postmodern culture welcomes experiences and defines truth through life. Moderns tapped eyes and ears, but postmoderns have rediscovered smell, taste, and touch. The modern church reduced Jesus to a book, creed, or idea. The postmodern church will literally "re-incarnate" Jesus as "flesh."

Need a metaphor? Most children's ministries resemble a McDonald's drive-through. Kids line up, order, and exit. It's a fast-food faith. But what if we operated more like a Rainforest Cafe? Life's jungle creates a sensory sanctuary. Can you help kids taste God? smell Jesus? touch the Spirit?

Pluralistic

Postmodern culture is tolerant. It's a "whatever" world. Truth is relative to personal experience. Where moderns lived in a black and white or gray culture, postmoderns question the colors altogether. They see "blight" or "whack" instead. To a modern, the Outback Steakhouse motto, “No rules. Just right.” is an oxymoron. To a postmodern, it makes perfect sense.

Children’s ministries will face increasing pressure to communicate Jesus as “the way, the truth, and the life” (John 14:6, emphasis added) to a post-Christian culture. Consequently, we must honor faith’s journey, including its doubts, discouragements, and dryness. Celebrate milestones. Create conversations. Carve memories. Console hardships.

Faith is an Amazing Race where, like passengers on Southwest Airlines, believers are “now free to move about” the kingdom. Tolerance doesn’t mean endorsement but divine empathy.

Image-Driven

Our culture thinks with its eyes.

Nike? A swoosh symbol. McDonald’s? Golden arches. Television single-handedly morphed a word world into an image culture. iPods aren’t a nifty fad. They’re the wave of the future: personalized, portable television.

In John 1:1, the Greek word for Word is logos. Moderns love the word. Postmoderns long for “logo.” They like to brand (tattoos). They don’t seek a “red letter” Bible but desire metaphor, story, and “eye-deas.”

Here’s a question: How does your children’s ministry brand itself? What mark do you leave on kids? What do your children “see” at church—on the walls, the PowerPoint, the handouts? Is your image tarnished? worn? irrelevant?

Reality

Reality television is no fad.

To a modern, reality is scientific and logical. Pictures don’t lie. Truth is graspable. Life’s problems have answers. But postmoderns feel otherwise. Technology creates alternative, virtual realities. What’s “real”? What’s “true”? Who knows? Consequently, postmodern culture thrives on authentic “get real” moments. It’s “life unscripted” (Fox Reality channel) or the “real thing” (Coca-Cola).

Either you’re “real” to your children, or you’re a spiritual hologram. Do they know your insecurities, pain, or troubles (and vice versa)? Fear Factor is a top show among elementary boys. What’s the “fear factor” of your children’s ministry? In a video game culture, kids want to be “in the game.”

So keep it real.

International

We live in global community.

A tsunami sparks worldwide philanthropy. A terror plot has international implications. The world is getting smaller. The modern operated within local contexts. Until television, news traveled by ear or print. Today we make instantaneous global connections. Tech support is a call to Singapore. Even my small Kentucky town boasts Chinese, Mexican, and Italian restaurants.

In global culture, tomorrow's children's ministries must refocus on the Great Go-Mission (Matthew 28:18-20). Every child is a missionary. Imagine the opportunity a mouse and modem afford. Download Google Earth and see the world.

Tech-Reliant

Today's children have grown within a tech-friendly climate. They're natives to a high-tech birthright (most born since 1960). Postmoderns find comfort in technology, not fear. They discover perfect pitch with cords.

Megatrends author John Naisbitt predicted that a high-tech culture creates high-touch opportunity. The two most accessed Internet categories are porn and dating. In a plastic world, intimacy is a driving need. Technology creates relational hunger.

Unfortunately, few children's ministries help families navigate technological landmines. Are we preparing for tomorrow's tech advances? Human engineering, bioterror, and identity theft will continue to flourish. Most transactions (loans, food, entertainment) will happen in cyberspace. Tomorrow's universities will be online, as modern seat-based, time-based institutions become increasingly irrelevant.

THE CULTURAL SWAMP: "IN IT? OF IT? WITH IT?"

In a postmodern world, cultural change is fluid. The trends that once took years to come and go rise and fall in weeks and days. Culture tends toward the extreme. Sexuality, violence, and profanity mark the television landscape. The Internet is flooded with pornography, gambling, and danger.

In this polluted cultural swamp, children grow.

Also troublesome is that for the first time since A.D. 325—when Constantine charted a Christian empire—we're now living in a post-Christian world. Christianity's influence—politically, educationally, philosophically—is largely questioned, ridiculed, or dismissed.

Historically, the church responds to cultural sewage through isolation, choosing separation or a subculture that parallels secular society. Christian education. Christian entertainment. Christian business. Separation from the world insulates and provides understandable security.

Conversely, some Christian families adopt cultural immersion. Such Christian homes allow questionable television shows, music, and books (not to mention behavior). These homes present problems for children's ministries who attract children deeply stained by cultural pollutants. When Bobby launches the "F" word at home, his parents smirk, but at church his flowery language offends.

It's a "kagoy" world. A culture where "kids are getting older younger." Many parents culturally baptize their children through questionable fashion, entertainment, or behavioral choices (alcohol, violence, or even sexual activity). Other well-meaning parents immerse preteen kids in activities—beauty pageants, talent contests, or sports—that pressure, push, and pull them into adult venues, values, and even vices.

Consequently, neither isolation nor immersion is ultimately healthy.

So what's the solution to this cultural swamp?

A positive approach is to inoculate children against offensive content. An inoculation actually injects the virus into the system to build immunity. Similarly, children's ministries (and parents) can immunize kids against cultural toxins.

Postmodern culture encourages experiential truth and embraces relativism. In a whatever, wherever world, children will need a Christ-centered compass that always points them home. Nevertheless, small doses of alternative truth, questionable behavior, and even inappropriate language—within proper age and family contexts—can ultimately build immunity (discernment and right decisions) against later adoption of these same cultural pollutants.

For example, children will hear offensive language. The isolationist would cover Junior's ears. The immersionist would look away. Those choosing inoculation would frame the language within context to develop teachable moments. A preschooler flaunting his "middle finger" is different than a fifth-grader doing the same. The question isn't what happened, but why.

Children's ministries can only inoculate to a point. Most immunization is family-based. We cannot alter family values unless granted permission.

Inoculation is healthy, but there is a higher path.

Jesus called his disciples—through his own example—to live incarnationally within culture. Incarnational means sensing pain and stepping into tragedy to enact change. It's being light or salt. It's John 3:16. Every evil is an expression of emptiness and envy (James 4:1-3). Profanity, violence, sensuality, abuse, and addiction are simply bandages. Inoculation builds immunity, but incarnational living leads to victory. Immunity prevents cultural stains, but incarnational living loves the stained.

Grace is the word.

Children, especially those who are culturally stained, are open to incarnational strategies that evoke grace, relationship, worth, and security. A children's ministry that empathizes with hurt children, builds bridges, loves unconditionally, and lifts kids to better life decisions (in speech, purity, behavior, values) is one that ultimately rescues and redeems.

Incarnational children's ministry will be criticized, especially from isolationists. "We don't want bad language at church!" "That's devil's music!" "That movie isn't a good one." But grace isn't nice, fair, or even rational (something isolationist critics fail to recognize).

Does that mean anything goes?

Absolutely not.

A positive children's ministry that leads incarnationally won't license profanity or inappropriate activity. However, it will empathize and encourage better behavior (and enact logical consequences for continuous misbehavior). A child who repeatedly hits others cannot be tolerated or trusted within a classroom. Likewise kids who constantly use profanity or suggestive gestures—despite admonishment—must face the consequence (including suspension from activities).

Incarnational children's ministry partners with families to teach improved parenting skill and strategy. It feels with a family to understand why children act up or out. It inoculates families against wider cultural toxins through biblical teaching. Ultimately, it lives grace. Wild forgiveness. Outrageous love. Unlimited favor.

THIS IS A SAMPLE
The number of pages is limited.

Purchase the item for the complete version.

